THE BOY'S CASE DELAYED.

BUT DELAY NOW WILL ONLY RENDER JUSTICE MORE CERTAIN.

Jaslo Shephard's Friends Must Win, with Right Upon Their Side-Letters Which Tell of Many Hearts Touched by the Story of His Banishment and His Grandher's Longing.

There has been an unavoidable delay in the progress of the Josie Shephard case. But as justice is on the orphan boy's side, his case can not fail to grow stronger day by

As to the court proceedings, after a consultation of counsel it appeared that recent statutes had modified the law of 1857, regarding the right of the public to inspect the records of the institution. The assurances of Mr. Theron G. Strong, counsel for the opition, was given, however, that he would operate with THE EVENING WORLD in the matter in securing for it the information which is desired. In view of this disposition on the part of the asylum representative, the

The committee of the asylum which was to have considered the case last evening postponed the hearing for a week at the request of the counsel in the case. Many of the committeemen are now out of town, and next week the matter will be brought up before a full meeting of the Board. Several of the members of the committee who were visited yeslarday expressed themselves as ready to return the boy to his friends here, and there seems to be a good prospect that, as soon as all the facts in the case can be presented, the committee will not hesitate to restore the child at once. child at once.

THE VOICE OF THE PROPLE.

Letters Which Show that the Popular Heart Is Moved.

The Agitation Will Be Kept Up. I hope THE EVENING WORLD will keep up its agitation for the return of the poor boy Josie Shephard. Don't be discouraged if you meet with obstacles. I know from a bitter experience that it is one of the most difficult experience that it is one of the most difficult things to secure the surrender of a ward of an asylum. The law seems to be made chiefly for the benefit and convenience of the managers of such institutions. But with justice on your side, as it certainly is in this case, there is no such word as fail,

If the directors of the Juvenile Asylum will consider the strong and invincible array of fact and argument presented for the re turn of Josie Shephard and afterwards ex perience the pathetic spell of that beautiful melody, "Bring Back My Exiled Boy," they cannot hesitate as to their duty in the premises.

RICHARD WATSON. Brooklyn, E. D.

Was the Commitment Legal ?

The legality of the admission of Josie Shephard to the Juvenile Asylum may well questioned. It appears from the grandmother's statement that the boy was not seven years of age when committed. If this can be established, in my opinion his commitment was null and void.

POLICEMEN'S MANY ILLS.

They Are Not All Such as Fill Up the Sick

That there should be an average of eightyeight policemen on the sick-list constantly out of a total force of 3,232 men, as shown in the police report for the fiscal year just completed, has caused much remark.

The men are subjected to a rigid physical examination when they become applicants for appointment, and the force may be fairly lassed as perfectly constituted physically. Why should sickness be so prevalent among these stalwart men? A cursory examination of the hours of duty of a patrolman will in part answer the ques tion. An Everyon Worth reporter pondering over the report, asked the first patrol-man he met: "Why is there so much sick-ness among the members of the force?"

"Now you are like everybody else," he re-plied. "Folks think a policeman draws big

"Now you are like everybody else," he replied. "Folks think a policeman draws big pay and is only an ornament to the street corner. Most of the men who want to get on the force have no idea of the amount of work they will be called upon to do. If they did they would withdraw their applications.

"I began work Monday morning at 6 o'clock. I went on the dog-watch till 8 o'clock. The other section of my squad did reserve duty in the station. I had from 8 to 9.30 to get my breakfast. Then I was on patrol till noon. After dinner, at 1 o'clock, I became a reserve in the station until 6 r.m.

Then supper and rest at the station until 11.30 o'clock. Then from midnight to 6 o'clock Thesday morning on patrol again.

"One week is just like another and each day is divided like this: Eight hours off duty each twenty-four hours, two hours in which to eat three meals and three hours and fifty minutes in which to sleep. If I want to sleep six hours I must take the extra time out of my off-duty time, and at every hour of the twenty-four I am either under the command of my captain, or at least within call. While twenty-four I am either under the command of my captain, or at least within call. While not on actual patrol duty I must be in the station, either as a reserve or what is called off duty. The only relief is the six hours spent at home after midnight each third night.

"And this so-called 'off-duty' time is much of it taken from me by my being called or sent to do duty at strikes, fires, parades, inspections, registering, elections and attending court.

inspections, registering, electrons and tending court.

"Such events take up an average of 1,440 hours each year, or four hours of each day. That leaves me at best only seven hours and forty minutes in each twenty-four hours for sleep and recreation, and that time is so cut up into small bits that a policeman may be said truthfully never to have a full night's rest.

"People think that if a policeman wants to get off for a day all he has to do is to plead sickness, get his day off, and draw his pay while he loafs. But there is a police phy sician for each two precincts, and a man who thinks he is sick must obtain a certificate, after a thorough examination, that he is unfit for duty. Then he may go home and be sick, but he gets only half pay during his sickness.

Reserve duty means staying at the station until sent out to guard the entrance to tion until sent out to guard the entrance to a theatre, to a reception, or wedding, to look after a fire or a ball or a public meeting. If there is a political meeting in the back end of a saloon, two policemen must stand at the

THEIR ANNUAL MEETING OPENED AT THE MADISON SQUARE THEATRE.

An Important Point to Be Discussed-How the Order Has Grown and Spread-The Exalted Officers-General Notes on the Attendance and Plans for the Three Days

This is one of the principal points which will engage the Elks' attention during the three days' session.

July was chosen instead of December, which has been the usual time for the meeting, because July is the time of the year when the members are less occupied, while December is one of the most busy months for the thestrical profession, members of which
